

Interesting leadership resources

Here are some less known links to useful information on leadership which I often use in coaching. Most managers are very enthusiastic about them. Maybe they can inspire you too.

- The Leadership Competences of the Management Standards Centre is a fully developed and freely accessible leadership framework. The standards are proven benchmarks of best practice in leadership. For a detailed description and free download of the full set, see http://www.management-standards.org/content_1.aspx?id=10:1917
- The leadership page on 12manage http://www.12manage.com/i_1.html gives an overview of leadership methods, models and theories - each with a short summary.
- Dr. Martin Seligman has been studying the link between competencies and satisfaction for years. On his website <http://www.authentic happiness.sas.upenn.edu/> you'll find a series of tests. The VIA Signature Strengths test is an interesting one to determine where you are good at and what you like to do. It's ideal to prepare for a career step yourself or for someone else.

I hope you find this information useful. Enjoy the reading.
